WEEKLY USA GRAIN AND PROTEIN REPORT September 14, 2024

This week was USDA-WASDE week once again and most experts feel that there was not much in the report to get the market excited.

WASDE USA corn production is steady but some experts feel that the yield numbers will have to fall in coming months due to the continued dry weather in parts of the corn belt.

Looking at prices after the WASDE, late on Friday, we see corn prices up by about USD 2m/t on the week, soybeans pretty well unchanged, soymeal down by about USD 2 m/t while US hard winter wheat was up by between USD 3 and 7 m/t depending on the grade. USA spring wheat was also up by about USD 7 m/t.

Wheat prices were higher due more to the Russia/Ukraine situation than any change in the USA situation. The attack by Russia on a Ukraine grain vessel was enough to get the market moving higher.

Soybeans had tried to move prices higher after the WASDE report but that didn't hold as prices on Friday slipped a little lower.

USA corn prices moved a little higher, also on the black Sea situation and on the slightly tighter corn ending stocks seen in the WASDE report. Experts seem to feel that corn prices may have reached the bottom for now. The continued worries about the Mississippi River situation will probably keep FOB NOLA prices firm.

Estimated Bulk Grain Freight in USD per m/t, basis heavy grains.

SECTION 2 --- FISHMEAL COMMENTS AND PRICES: PERUVIAN “INDICATION” FISHMEAL PRICES:

Adjusted Peru fishmeal export numbers show a total of 672.700 m/t shipped to the end of July 2024. 652,400 m/t were sent to Asia ---- 615,000 to China and 24,000 to Japan. Early shipment estimates for August are at 109,000 m/t – with 99,000 m/t to China. China represents close to 92% of total Peru fishmeal exports so far in 2024.

Estimated fishmeal prices in Peru seem to be about USD 50 m/t lower this week – probably because fishmeal prices in China are moving a little lower due to the large stocks on hand and more on the way.

There is still no fishmeal trading being done in Peru --- no stock and no certainty about the next fishing season. Most trade reports seem to feel that prices could move a little lower depending on the size of the next Peru fishing quota late in October.
